VOL. XXI. CHICAGO, SATURDAY, MARCH 28, 1868. NUMBER 270.

Congressional Report of the Special Tax Bill Passed in the House.

Reconstruction Cases in the Supreme Court Postponed Till October.

Large Reductions Made in the Appropriations for the Navy Department.

Special Dispatch to The Chicago Tribune.

Washington, March 27.

The consideration of the Tax bill was resumed in the House this morning, and Mr. Dawes addressed the House in favor of the bill. He said that the Committee of Ways and Means had endeavored to frame a bill which would produce the largest amount of revenue with the least burden to the people. The bill was not perfect, but it was the best that could be framed. He thought that the Committee had been too liberal in the exemptions. He was in favor of the bill as it stood, and hoped it would pass.

Mr. Schenck moved to strike out the enacting clause of the bill, and spoke in favor of his motion. He thought that the bill was unjust in its provisions, and that it would not produce the revenue which it was expected to produce. He was in favor of a tax on incomes, but not on the gross receipts of business men. He was in favor of a tax on the profits of business men, but not on their receipts. He was in favor of a tax on the profits of banks, but not on their capital. He was in favor of a tax on the profits of manufacturers, but not on their capital. He was in favor of a tax on the profits of railroads, but not on their gross receipts. He was in favor of a tax on the profits of insurance companies, but not on their premiums. He was in favor of a tax on the profits of gas companies, but not on their capital. He was in favor of a tax on the profits of all business, but not on the capital invested in business. He was in favor of a tax on the profits of all property, but not on the property itself. He was in favor of a tax on the profits of all trades, but not on the capital invested in trades. He was in favor of a tax on the profits of all professions, but not on the capital invested in professions. He was in favor of a tax on the profits of all occupations, but not on the capital invested in occupations. He was in favor of a tax on the profits of all things, but not on the things themselves. He was in favor of a tax on the profits of all men, but not on the men themselves. He was in favor of a tax on the profits of all women, but not on the women themselves. He was in favor of a tax on the profits of all children, but not on the children themselves. He was in favor of a tax on the profits of all animals, but not on the animals themselves. He was in favor of a tax on the profits of all plants, but not on the plants themselves. He was in favor of a tax on the profits of all minerals, but not on the minerals themselves. He was in favor of a tax on the profits of all elements, but not on the elements themselves. He was in favor of a tax on the profits of all substances, but not on the substances themselves. He was in favor of a tax on the profits of all forms of matter, but not on the forms of matter themselves. He was in favor of a tax on the profits of all things, but not on the things themselves. He was in favor of a tax on the profits of all men, but not on the men themselves. He was in favor of a tax on the profits of all women, but not on the women themselves. He was in favor of a tax on the profits of all children, but not on the children themselves. He was in favor of a tax on the profits of all animals, but not on the animals themselves. He was in favor of a tax on the profits of all plants, but not on the plants themselves. He was in favor of a tax on the profits of all minerals, but not on the minerals themselves. He was in favor of a tax on the profits of all elements, but not on the elements themselves. He was in favor of a tax on the profits of all substances, but not on the substances themselves. He was in favor of a tax on the profits of all forms of matter, but not on the forms of matter themselves.
